The Tendu leaves are used as Beedi (rural form of cigarette) wrappers.

It is also called as 'green gold' in tribal areas because tendu leaves are the biggest source of income for a large population dependent on forest produce collection.

Under this arrangement, the Forest Department of the state gets the tendu leaves collected by the locals and then sells it to the traders. The department also issues permission to carry tendu leaves from one place to another.
